A Britisher, resident of Memphis, and who formerly was connected with steamship lines in London, tackled one of our Memphis marines a few days ago, and undertook to teach him a thing or two pertinent to the profession-particularly how and where to do the "liquids." The result was the Britisher got so "blarsted" drunk that he had to be done up in a package and sent home, while the Memphis expert went on about his business as dry as a powder-

Captain Lewis G. Wood; of the St. Bernard coal association of this city, leaves this morning for the Ohio river, where he will purchase for his company a wharfboat to be placed at the mouth of Whiteriver for the purpose of doing a coal and freight business there. We are informed that the company have two beats in view-one at Evansville. 200 feet long, 45 feet beam, and 5 feet hold; and one at Carr's landing, 175 feet long, 38 feet beam, and 5 feet hold. Both boats have upper works for office and sleeping apartments. We also learn that the upper part of the wharfboat will be leased for a hotel.

The owners of the steamer Forest City have contracted for a new hull for their boat, to be completed by the middle of September. She will be made some larger, and will have a fine model. The engines of the old Forest City (which grees lower than the day previous. At | are No. 1) with new boilers of larger dimensions, will be placed in the new boat. Captain A. O'Neal, of the steamer Forest City, has been running a boat between Wheeling and Steubenville for nearly twenty-five years.

The excursion on the Parker last night was enjoyed by a large party of the belies and beaux of the binffs-the elite of Memphis society. The preparations for the ceasion by the committee in charge, aided by Captain Bob Wise and his staff were first-class in every particular, so conspicuously so that the Parker and her officers received many compliments from all participating. The ladies particularly expressed delight, and evidently enjoyed the excursion. We were there, and were in better condition to die than ever before, or, perhaps, ever will be again—just as near heaven as we ever expect to be without the privilege of stepping in. The hour of closing the festivities was a sad one, indeed. Our heart spontaneously gave out the following sentiment, which we have stolen for this occasion:

Something is gone that made life sweet, Dead and buried beyond recall; Out of the sky where sunlight smilled Only the twilight shadows fall.

He was a handsome marine, and one of the guests of the happy party on board the Parker last night.
